The Last Train from Paris Stacy Cohen

"Stacy Cohen interweaves fact and fiction in this novel, set in World War II Paris during the Nazi occupation. Loosely basing her tale on the real-life adventures of artist Jean Miro, Cohen unfolds a forbidden love story as France fights for its liberation. Lovers of art, history, and romance will find this novel a real page-turner."

--Julie Pekrul, Between the Covers, Harbor Springs, Mich.

"Stacy Cohen shows an overwhelming amount of beauty in her novel The Last Train From Paris, keeping well attached to the traditional WWII love story, but still managing to craft a suspenseful story . . . The Last Train from Paris is a wonderful addition to the genre . . . It's fun, loud, bold, provocative, and quite simply, glorious."

--Bookreview.com

Set against the chilling backdrop of Nazi-occupied Paris in 1944, The Last Train from Paris tells the story of forbidden love between an artist turned French soldier and a Russian ballerina. While apprenticing for Henri Matisse, painting the scenery for a ballet at L'Academie Nationale de Musique--Theatre de l'Opera, Jean-Luc Beauchamp meets Natasha, who becomes his creative muse and lone innamorata, inspiring him to become the painter he dreams of being. But Jean-Luc isn't the only man who is enamored with Natasha, and when a Nazi officer forces his attentions on her, she must feign indifference to keep Jean-Luc alive. Driven by passion for his country, his art, and his lover, Jean-Luc fights for France's liberation, even as Natasha loses her freedom and desperately struggles to keep her own secrets hidden.

Loosely based on the real-life adventures of Joan Miro, who escaped France on the last train from Paris with his Constellation portfolio, The Last Train from Paris skillfully interweaves truth and fiction into an epic that will appeal to lovers of art and history and romantics everywhere.
