This story was originally published in Day One, a weekly literary journal dedicated to short fiction and poetry from emerging writers.

Devoted readers converge on a small college town in Mississippi to pay tribute to the reclusive, alcoholic writer who once lived there. Drawn too by its literary lore, a burnt-out writer makes the journey and finds himself curating The Author's home. Still uninspired, and ignored by the town's boozy intellectuals, the young curator falls hopelessly in love with Maggie, the owner of the local bookstore who claims to have blood ties to The Author. She, in turn, is in love with professor and writer Bradley whose wife, Gilly, also has a strange, twisted link to The Author.

One dark night, the four of them make a drunken pilgrimage to their literary hero's grave and the crossed paths of love and sex come to light. Choosing to ape The Author's tradition of illicit romance and primal selfishness, the group's moonlit fumbblings lead to predictable, irreparable loss.
